

I oppose the changes proposed for broadcast ownership. If -- or apparently when -- enacted, these changes practically guarantee control of broadcast media will belong to just a handful. This will have dire consequences as far as the variety of news and information available to the public. Narrowing the scope of media ownership to such an extent creates monopolies (or makes existing ones stronger), silences minority voices, and goes against the intent of public ownership of the airwaves.